Local solutions for global requirements

Today more and more IT companies offer their products on a global scale. This does however increase the need for local capabilities even more, driven by service and support and also by customer requirements and simply by demand for your product.

Proximity to market is a key issue in today's business environment.

To face these challenges companies require local and flexible supply chain solutions to help them serve local customers. Prolimax, with locations in Ireland and The Netherlands – your gateway to Europe – is the first step to setting up a European presence.
